

Dreams, everyone has a few if not at least one. Dreams are not those you see when you are asleep but those which do not let you sleep, those which give you sleepless nights and restless days.

Everyone wants to do something, to be somebody.
Every living person has dreams,
but few take the steps to achieve them and very few individuals see their dreams come true.

Most of us are wishful thinkers,
we waste our time and energy by wishing, by thinking of if's and buts. The majority of us are dreamers only in the sense of the word. Indulging in mere wishful thinking is a waste of the mighty thought force.

Thought force when concentrated on a particular dream or goal can do wonders!

As you dream, what's the point in dreaming small? If you are to dream then dream about the big,
the audacious, the scary, the difficult else do not dream at all.

Every man who walks the earth has a dream,
a small one albeit. How different are you?
What good are you? Many of us dream small and even achieve them but do you want to end up with the majority or be a class apart.

Dream big dreams,
those which boil
your blood and stir your soul.

A large crowd of people is gathered at night, releasing thousands of glowing paper lanterns into the dark sky. The lanterns are small, rectangular, and made of paper, with a warm orange light emanating from within. They are scattered across the entire frame, creating a dense field of light against the black background. In the foreground, the silhouettes of people are visible, some looking up at the sky. The overall atmosphere is magical and celebratory.

Such dreams have power and magic in them. They can move men, material and money. Men do not like the ordinary. Only such big dreams can excite others to follow you, to help you realize your dream.

A scuba diver in a black wetsuit is floating in clear blue water. The diver is positioned in the lower right quadrant of the frame, with their arms outstretched and hands open. Bubbles are visible around the diver's head. The water surface is visible at the top of the image, showing ripples and light reflections. The overall scene is serene and contemplative.

Every outrageous dream may not be achievable. You might fail, you might burnout, and you may even die. But what of it? Thousands like you are born and die every day. What difference does your death make?

When you die let people think of you as 'a dreamer who fought without rest or respite to make his dreams come true'.

Dreaming alone is not enough, apart from a dreamer you should also be a doer, but remember without a dream there is no 'do'.

You might be laughed at, you might be ridiculed, so what? It's your dream hold it close to your heart. Protect it. Let not the follies of this world weaken you in the pursuit of your dreams.

A high-angle, long-exposure photograph of a busy street in Japan. A yellow taxi with red and black stripes is driving through a crosswalk. The street is filled with pedestrians, many of whom are holding umbrellas, suggesting it is raining. The image has a motion blur effect, giving a sense of a fast-paced, bustling environment. The text is overlaid on the upper right portion of the image.

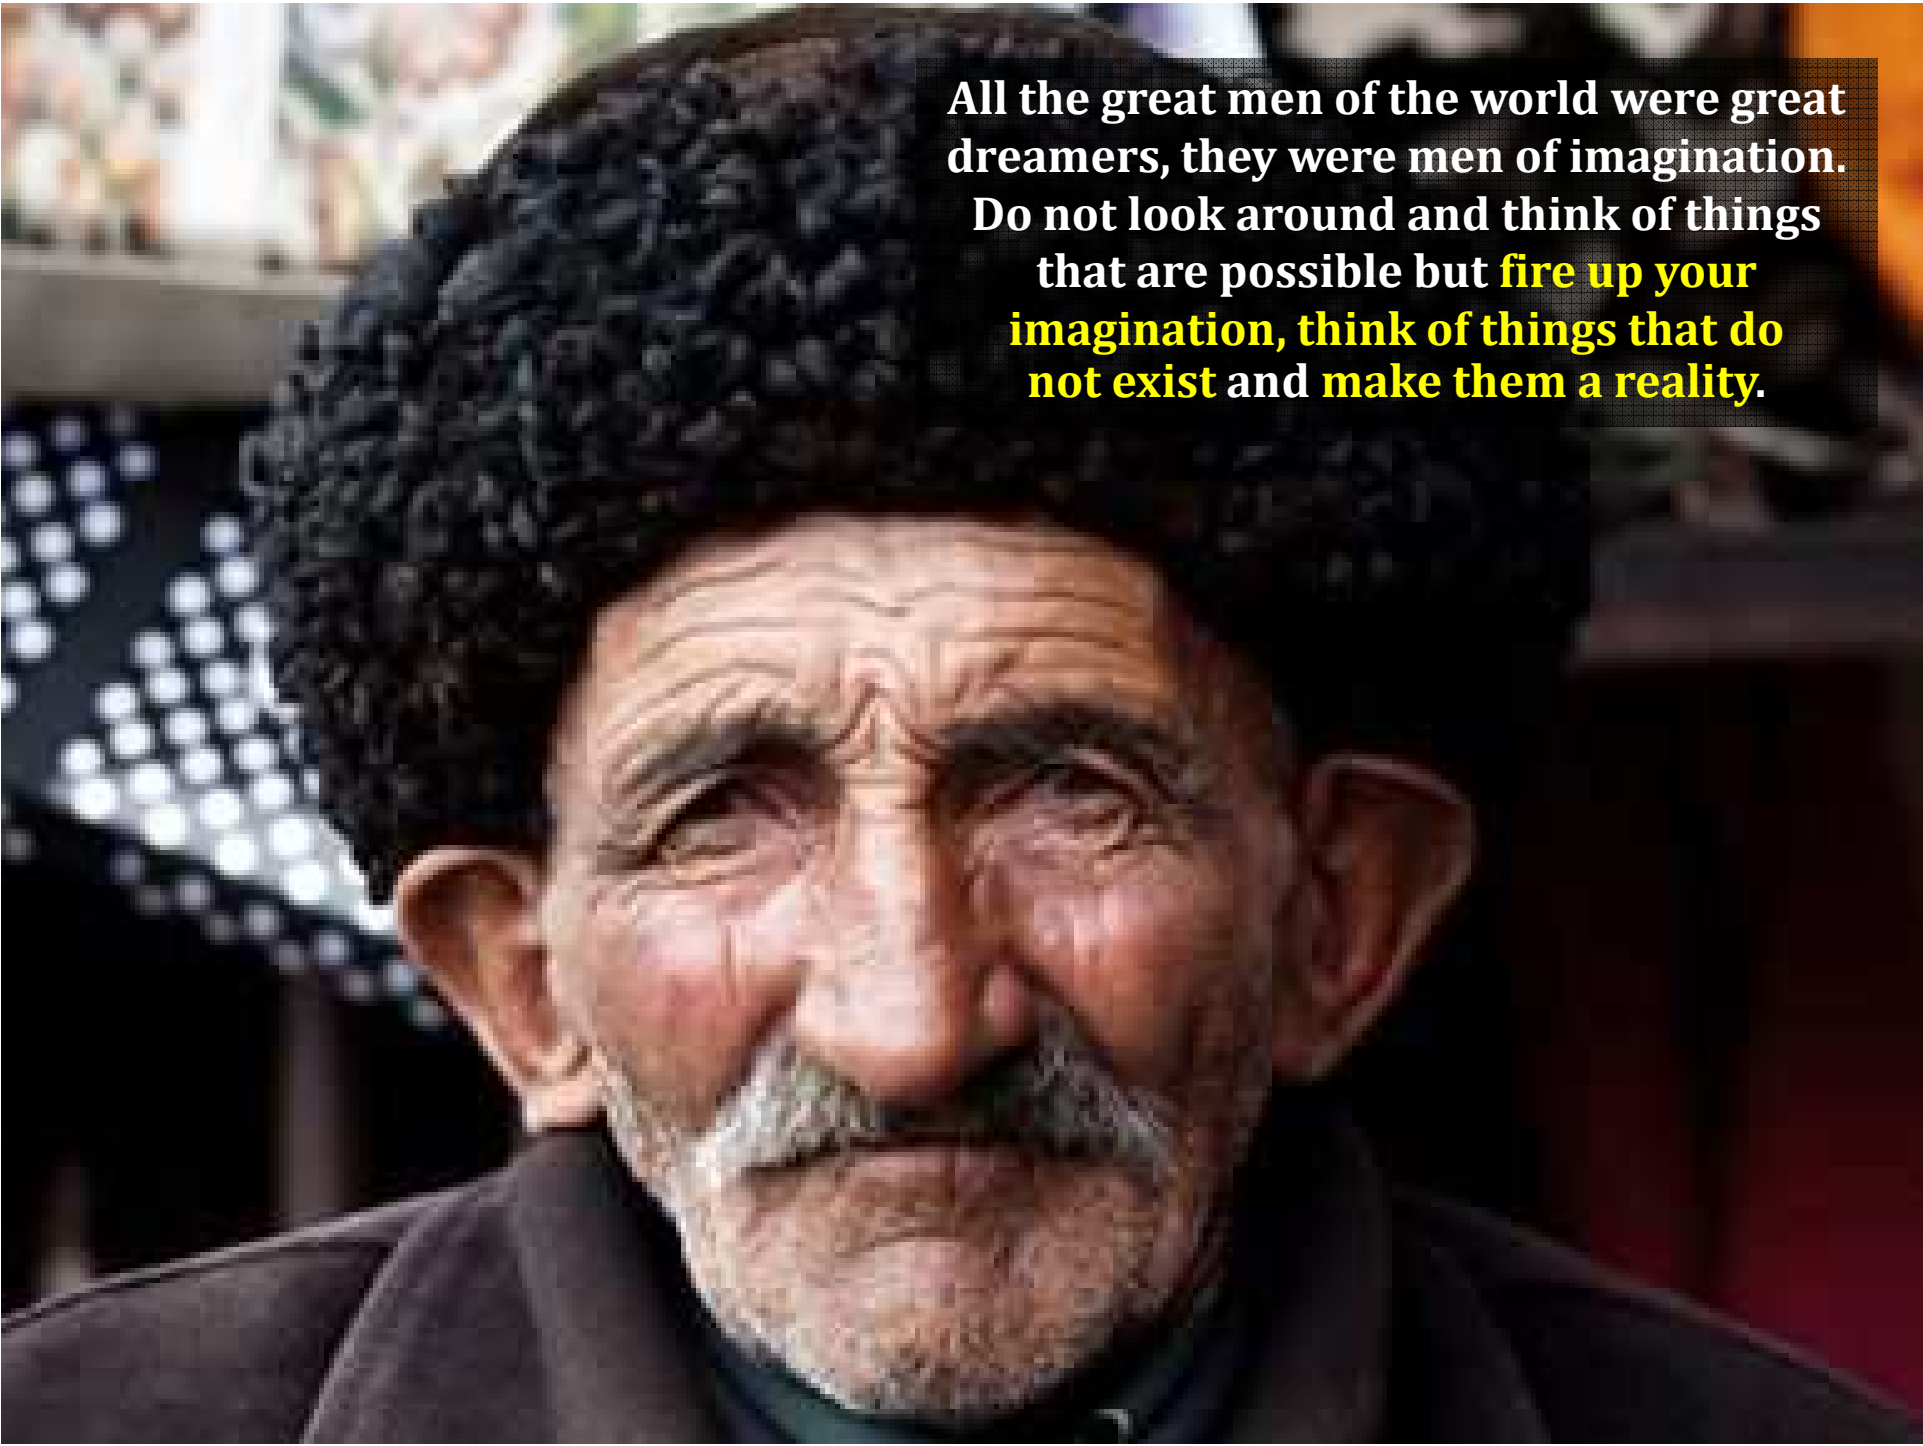

What is life without a dream to go after or without something to strive for?
Life is not about just passing your time here. It's not about spending your days in vain waiting for the death to come.

It's about the pursuing of your dreams. It's about bringing to light those mighty and difficult things which others only dream about in their sleep.

Spend your life in such pursuit of your dreams and aspirations that death itself would have to think twice before taking you away and leaving your dreams unfulfilled.

All the great men of the world were great dreamers, they were men of imagination. Do not look around and think of things that are possible but fire up your imagination, think of things that do not exist and make them a reality.

To achieve big, outrageous dreams you need to have a lion's courage, an iron will, an uncompromising ability to persist and an unshakable faith in yourselves.

When you have such faith in yourselves and your dream, providence itself will move to help you. Dream big, so big that even god would point to you and say here is a dreamer whom I am proud to have as my son .

Dream big; else
there is no point in dreaming at all!!!
