

Why So Serious?

“When I am walking a dark road, I am a man who walks alone.”

-Iron Maiden (Fear of the Dark)

When fear lies in the heart of men,
They become bestial in nature,
Cowering in the dark, biding their time
Waiting for the slightest provocation,
To attack before they are found.

The road ahead is shrouded by a black veil,
And only one may pass safely through,
Once chosen, there is no turning back,
From these doors that lead to doom.
On this darkening road I must walk alone.

You find yourself caught in the spider’s web,
Fear is no altruist in choosing its victims.
