How does it happen?

First thing u do as you settle on your chair is turn on ur PC or Lappy & wait till u get a Cup of tea, with an abstract thought on mind, how will the whole day pass ?

You collect all possible files and get all the papers out of the drawer, Now that your desk is all dressed to look busy, u think its your turn to look busy, so u start checking your mailbox, “AAhaaa so many mails !!”, You feel great & important.. but wait for a moment, in so many forward mails u find a mail from a person u never wanted one... That says “Urgent”. This mail is reminder to submit your reports that is pending since you started that assignment almost a month back.

Now u r all set to work on the reports & say to yourself c’mom “I should complete this today for sure.” One of you cell phone starts ringing, you answer & bang the phone. After all report submission is priority, you have taken so much pain to put Diagrams, Graphs, Images & Matter most importantly (All thanks to Google).

You still require customizing the report & your other cell phone suddenly gives you a message & also number of mails start increasing as the day passes by. All this was not enough that you get a call on direct line, reminding you of report submission. You fell so bugged that you give standing instructions to everyone in the office not to connect you on any call, switch off the cell phones, & log out from Web Ids. After all you don’t get such serious feeling to work sincerely every day.

Now that basis of the report is structured, u edit the fields required, put header & footer, insert bullets, change font size & style. (Thanks to Microsoft Office).

Then comes the most important task, u need to take care that turnover, profits, debts, taxes et cetera are in place. This is the place u were stuck since past 15 days, other things as mentioned, you keep changing everyday to get the feel. You start connecting in any manner possible with your friends, relatives, colleagues & seniors around the world to get you out of this situation, but no luck coz u only don’t know where u r stuck exactly, so everyone exhibits their talent & skill to confuse you even more. More than half day has passed away, Ur report is still there where it was yesterday, but looks good & feels good that u have at least tried all the possible sources.

Somehow u feel that content is not important & after all no one would understand such figures even if u try to put them in the order required. So u decide to put them in generally acceptable manner. U r very sure that effort you had been taking since 15 days will pay u & today’s effort will not really cost you. Now that somehow you have finalized the report u decide to mail but what else can happen.. Any Guesses ? Your net connection is down, u break your head with IT & Admin department but no use... that’s the way they try to keep themselves busy.. After all even they work!!

Somehow connection is restored & your report is mailed. U have only one feeling on your mind that, “I always comply with my deadlines, by hook or by crook, I am the only person who works so hard to accomplish the assignment given.”
